THE HILLS COME ALIVE

In the days of yore, it was known as Ootacamund and was home to indigenous tribes such as the Todas, who lived in harmony with nature. Named after the Toda word 'othakal-mund,' meaning 'house in mountains', it was a summer retreat for the Britishers in the pre-independence era. Developed as a British settlement, it still bears the colonial legacy in its architecture. The Nilgiri Mountain Railway, a UNESCO World Heritage Site, runs through it, making a picturesque locale even more endearing.

The Western Ghats' ecological importance elevates its charm, making it both a scenic retreat and an ecological gem. Situated at 2,240 m above sea level, it's a postcard that has come to life.

A HOLIDAY TO A CHARMING OOTY GETAWAY

When you drive toward Marlimund and up the winding mountain roads, the air becomes crisp, the tea gardens shimmer in the sunlight, and time slows down. As you enter, lush greenery welcomes you, revealing the bungalow gradually. Situated atop a hill with stunning views, Marli Hill Bungalow is set in the middle of nature, away from the bustle of daily life.

LIVE IN THE PAST

Marli Hill Bungalow is the ideal place for travelers who appreciate a mix of old-fashioned charm and contemporary style. A throwback to the British colonial architectural style, the Bungalow has a spacious veranda, and modern art decorates large walls, blending colonial elegance with modern style.

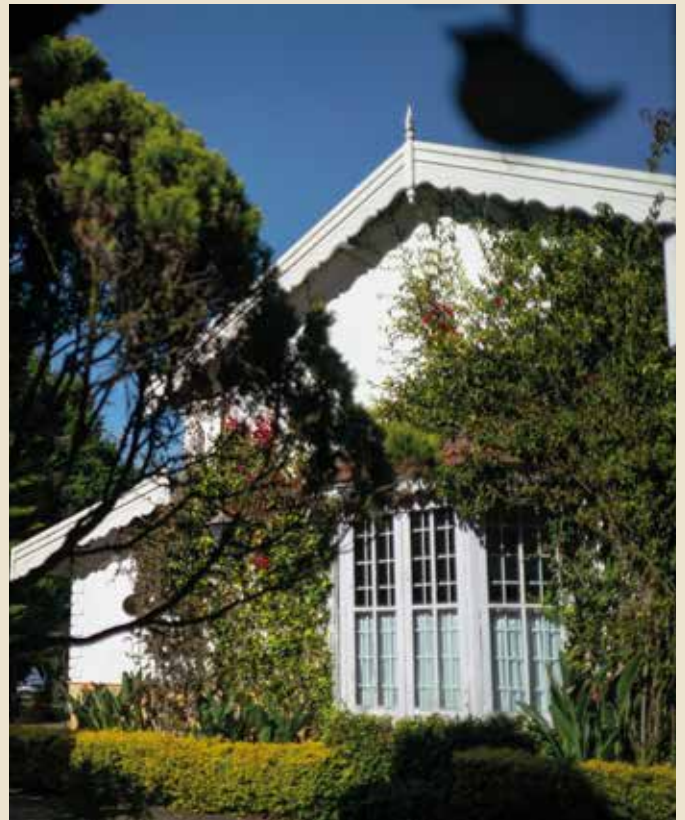

Bathed in the soft glow of natural light streaming through expansive windows, Marli Hill Bungalow has many cosy nooks where you can snuggle with a book or simply choose to be. The bungalow offers a choice of six expansive rooms, with a vast dining area. The wooden flooring, sloping ceiling, and plush antique furniture add to its old-world charm. You can stay indoors and enjoy the comfort of the lounge spaces or step outside and relax by the gazebo.
