

The Sonorium, the world's largest sound healing dome, is an acoustically refined and energetically vibrant sanctuary, created to cultivate deep inner awareness and gently recalibrate the being. Conceived as both a healing chamber and a living instrument, it is a space where sound becomes structure and vibration becomes medicine.

At its heart lies the Nidranantar, a central still point of deep repose, around which a coherent circle of large, specialized NEW WAVES instruments is arranged. Each instrument is meticulously crafted and tuned in Just Intonation across a harmonic scale ranging from 64 Hz to 1024 Hz, based on natural harmonic proportions. Together, they form a sacred geometry of sound that invites rest, realignment, and renewal.

The Sonorium is built on a fundamental truth. The body possesses an innate intelligence to heal itself when placed in the right state. Sound, as a precise relationship of frequencies, has the power to create that state, to reset, realign, and restore coherence across physical, emotional, mental, and subtle layers of being. All matter is condensed energy. All energy moves through vibration. Health, then, is simply being in tune.

The Sonorium bridges ancient wisdom and contemporary science. The polarity between structured, tuned tone, symbolic of cosmic harmony, and primal, organic sound is resolved into an integrated whole. The result is a deeply tactile, immersive experience that gently shifts the nervous system out of fight or flight and into parasympathetic dominance. This supports an Alpha state of heightened inner awareness and profound relaxation, naturally stimulating homeostatic balance and the body's self-healing capacities.

The architectural form itself participates in the healing. The domed structure is articulated through a rare seven-petal geometry, reflecting the seven chakras of the human body. Each petal traces a rhythmic ascent from grounding to transcendence, while simultaneously symbolizing the descent of consciousness into form. This creates a continuous dialogue between body, space, and sound.

Developed in collaboration with Svaram, every element of the Sonorium, including space, instruments, tuning, and silence, works in precise harmony to support deep listening, resonance, and reintegration.

As Mr. Faizal, its founder, reflects:

“The vision for the Sonorium came to me during a visit to Auroville. A sound healing experience there reconnected me to my early years and planted the first seeds of what tulâh would become. I knew that true integration required a dedicated space for sound. After years of research with architects and sound engineers, we built our Sonorium, an instrument in itself.

If everything created has a vibration, then health is simply being in tune. Music is the art of proportions and frequencies, while sound healing is the science of those frequencies. To repair anything, you must first reset it. The Sonorium offers that reset, allowing the body to realign and return to equilibrium.”

The Sonorium is not merely heard. It is experienced. A space where sound restores order, calms the parasympathetic nervous system, deepens inner awareness, and allows healing to unfold naturally through resonance.
